

Pertinent Paragraphs

In Chicago yesterday Pullman porters passed a resolution declaring "tips an insult and acceptance of them conducive to servility." The writer has covered a lot of territory over any number of railroads, and he has yet to witness "George" in the act of refusing a tip. In fact, for a two-bit tip you can see a display of ivory not to be surpassed anywhere for a like amount of money. In spite of the recent resolution we maintain that the easiest way to insult the average Pullman porter is to fail to occasionally cross his itching palm with silver.

A fire near the Pacheco pass has destroyed thousands of acres of feed, took its toll of beef cattle and was responsible for the death of one man. The devastation is the price of carelessness on the part of two hunters, according to reports. It seems too bad that people cannot learn to be careful with fire—especially in the fields and woods. It is not because they don't know better. Everyone who can read has at one time or another read articles on the havoc wrought by forest fires. They have read warnings posted by automobile associations and the forestry department—and they have read, in their offices, pamphlets issued by insurance companies. The pamphlets, along with a live cigarette stub, usually find their way to the wastebasket.

While we have the pan hot, let's put in a fresh shot of grease and see what we can do with the numerous half-baked nimrods who have, to date, made the casualty list of the World war seem insignificant by comparison. Five days of the deer season have passed into the realm of yesterdays and five hunters have chewed the dust. One a day—not bad. Of course, some of the stricken were only wounded. Witness Alfred Rivard of San Francisco who may lose only an arm through the carelessness of a fellow hunter. There are two good reasons why the California casualty list is so high in deer season. First, there are probably 500 hunters for every deer, and second, 450 out of every 500 hunters are city men, the vast majority of whom are not any too well versed in the handling of a gun. Mix the two and you have a potent poison. A veteran woman hunter was shot at five times, the fifth shot entering her foot, before the shooter got it through his skull that he was firing at a human target. When you hunt deer anyplace that is overrun with other hunters, remember that until you see the animal plainly, there is no deer to shoot at. The writer possesses artillery and a yen to hunt—but so far his yen for more years on earth has overpowered his desire to let a bit of blood.

That's all.

KIWANIS NOTES

"Bust the Combustion Engine or Make it Bust," was George Burrow's talk at Kiwanis this noon, and a real interesting one, too. He told more about such type engines than most of the men had ever heard. He has spent several years and considerable money on his patents and is making a few changes to perfect the machine.

Tuesday next will be speakers' contest day, with D. H. Cramer, Nic Hedegard, Ed Wiesendanger and Doc Merrill talking for glory. The subject will be "My Valuable Kiwanis." The judges are T. A. Cutting, Roy Archibald and E. R. Kennedy.

Plans for a formal opening of the new "youths' club hall" are being perfected.

Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Antrim of Fresno spent the week-end in San Francisco.

H. P. Bean entertained two of his old classmates of the University of Maine at his home on Williams road Sunday. They were C. W. Gibbs and Arthur L. Moore, who graduated together with Mr. Bean in June, 1879. All now live in California.

If you like an open road, in a car that can travel as fast as you care to drive it, you will enjoy it twice as much on Generals. If you have ever felt your tires at the end of a fast run, you know that speed means heat. By using only the purest friction and tread rubber in generous quantities, General reduces internal friction (the cause of heat in tires) to a minimum. With Generals you can travel far and fast with the comforting knowledge that they won't wither from heat when you need them most.

CAMPBELL, CALIF.

Due to the influence of Ralph Hyde two traffic officers have been at his insurance office every Wednesday for several weeks to take care of the applicants for operators' licenses. This has proved to be a big help to the people who possibly could not get in to San Jose to take the examination. Mr. Hyde reports that over 200 people have taken the examination every Wednesday. There are only seven days left in which to apply for licenses.

Tom Smith of San Tomas road, who was driving a Ford truck, collided with the sedan driven by W. J. Farum of Sunny Oaks, at the intersection of Rincon avenue and Winchester road Monday evening. Neither man was hurt and little damage was done to the cars, both of which were covered for liability and property damage.

SECOND INSTALLMENT

Remember Steddon, a pretty, unsophisticated girl, is the daughter of a kindly but narrow-minded minister in a small southwestern town. Her father,

Rev. Doctor Steddon, violently opposed to what he considers "worldly" things, accepts motion pictures as the cause for much of the evil of the present day. Troubled with a cough, Remember goes to see

Dr. Bretherick, an elderly physician, who is astonished at the plight in which he finds her. Pressed by the doctor, Remember admits her unfortunate affair with Elwood Farnaby, a poor boy, son of the town set. As Remember and Dr. Bretherick discuss the problem a telephone message brings the news that Elwood has been killed in an accident. Dr. Bretherick accordingly persuades Remember to go West, her cough serving as a plausible excuse; to write home of meeting and marrying a pretended suitor—"Mr. Woodville"—and later to write her parents announcing her "husband's" death before the birth of her expected child. Unable to alone bear her secret, Remember goes to her mother with it.

She said little, she carressed much. She confirmed Doctor Bretherick's prescription and joined the conspiracy, administering secret comfort to the girl and to the father.

And at last Mem was standing on the back platform of a train bound for the vast southwest, throwing kisses to her father and mother as they watched the train dwindling like a telescope drawn into itself.

They turned back to their lives as if they had closed a door upon themselves.

But Mem, as she turned to her place in the car, felt as if a portcullis had lifted. Before her was All-Outdoors.

The wheels ran with a rollicking lilt beneath the girl's body, throbbing likewise with a zest of velocity. Through her head an old tune ran:

I saw the boat go round the bend, Goodby, my lover goodby!

The deck was filled with traveling men.

Goodby, my lover, goodby!

She was on a train going round bend after bend, and the train was filled with traveling men. Some of them, as they zigzagged along the aisles, swept her face and form with glances like swift, lingering hands that hated to let her go.

She saw the gallant was the tall youth who had crushed past her in the corridor.

This was a startling sensation, a new kind of nakedness for her inexperienced soul.

The eyes of the women flung along the aisle also widened and tarried as they recognized in her a something she had not yet found out: that she was very, very pretty— attractive, compulsive.

She was plainly dressed and had never been adorned. Only her neatness kept her from shabbiness. But she had beauty and appeal. On the train Mem had expected to find on the journey leisure for contrition and the remodeling of her soul. But the world would not let her alone. Everything was new to her. Everything was a crowded film of novelty.

She knew the minimum of the outside sphere possible to a girl who had had any education at all. She had never been on a sleeping car before.

She had read no novels except such sweetened water as the Sunday school library afforded. She had seen no magazines at home except church publications. She had never been to a theatre or moving picture. She had never danced even a square dance.

She had never ridden a bicycle or a horse, and had never been in any automobile except some old bone-shaker that drowned conversation in its own rattle.

She had never gambled, or been profane or even slangy or disrespectful to her parents. She had never seen a cocktail.

She had never worn a low-necked, high skirted dress. She had never seen a bathing suit or had one on. Girls did not swim in the river at Calverly. In fact, she had escaped all the things that moralists point to as the reasons why girls go wrong.

Yet she had, as the saying is, gone wrong—utterly, indubitably.

Yet no fast young men had led her astray, or so much as tried to lead her astray. She had never made the acquaintance of a fast young man. Her betrothed lover was slow and honorable and religious, everything a young man ought to be.

But, unfortunately, there seemed to be volition in neither of them; they had just floated together with a mysterious bewilderment.

The clanking uproar of the entrance into Kansas City filled her ears. Mem had never seen a great city, and this metropolis had a tremendous majesty in her eyes.

Remember, thinking to stretch her legs on the station platform, joined the passengers who choked the straight corridor along the row of compartments. One of the doors opened and framed a tall and powerful young man with a peculiarly wistful face. His eyes brushed Mem and he lifted his hat as he asked her pardon for squeezing past her.

He knocked at another steel door and called through, "Oh, Robina, better come out for a bit of exercise."

While he waited some of the passengers were twisting their necks to watch him, and nudging and whispering to one another. When the door opened and Robina stepped out there was such a sensation and such a boorish staring that Mem turned to look.

A young woman of an almost dazzling beauty came out, smiling and bareheaded. She noted the yokelry in the corridor, and her smile died. She stepped back into her stateroom, and when she reappeared, she wore a large drooping hat and a thick black veil.

"I envy you the privilege of the veil," the young man said. Mem walked up and down the platform as if her feet were winged. She felt a longing to buy something for the sheer sport of buying and went so far as to buy two magazines devoted to the moving pictures.

One of the magazines slipped from under her elbow and fell to the ground and as she stooped to recover it her hand touched a hand that had just anticipated hers. She looked up quickly and her head knocked off the hat of the man who had tried to save her the trouble of picking up her magazine. She saw the gallant was the tall youth who had crushed past her in the corridor. His face came up again like a sun dawning across her horizon; his eyes beat upon her like long beams. There was a kind of pathos in them, but also a great brightness, which, like the

was a huge head of Robina Teele, all eyes and curls and an incredibly luscious mouth. Remember had never heard of her or seen her pictures, because her films were great "feature specials," too expensive for the villages.

There was a long article about her, and another about Tom Holby. This was not so amazing a coincidence as it seemed to Mem, for both Robina Teele and Tom Holby had press agents who would have been chagrined if any motion-picture periodical had appeared without some blazon of their employers.

Mem stared longest at the various pictures of Tom Holby. She found him in all manner of costumes and athletic achievements, and she read the rhapsody on him first.

Having never seen a moving picture of anybody, she had never seen him. Mem forgot for a long while that she was a respectable widow of a very poor sort, for it came to her in an avalanche of shame that she was neither respectable nor a widow.

But she was a fugitive now from her past and from such thoughts, and she caught up the magazines with a desperate eagerness, as if they were cups of nepenthe.

After dinner Mem found her way to the observation car and wrote a letter home. She was sealing it when she suddenly remembered Doctor Bretherick's prescription. She was to take a lover on the first day! She had mentioned nobody that she had met. Now she must describe the important man that she would never meet. He was an imaginary, and therefore a quite perfect character. She wrote: "Oh, I forgot! Whom do you suppose I ran into on the train? You'd never guess in a million years. You know when I went to Carthage to take care of Aunt Mabel? Well, do you remember my telling you about the awfully nice man I met at church? Mr. Woodville was his name? Remember? Well, would you believe it, he is on this train! Isn't it a small world! He has been most kind and polite. I met him in church, as you remember, and somehow I feel much safer not being alone. I'm sure you'll be glad. He's very religious, but awfully nice—I mean, so, of course, awfully nice. Good night again, you darlings!"

Being told that they recollected Mr. Woodville, her parents obligingly remembered him. Mrs. Steddon had been warned of this fiction and had collaborated in it.

Doctor Steddon was one of those who believe almost anything they read, especially when they hope for its truth. And there was nothing he hoped for so much as that his child should meet a good man and love him and be loved by him.

Mem spent most of the next day planning her second letter home and growing acquainted with that husband of hers. She used Tom Holby as a model.

Crossing the desert the train came to an abrupt halt. A driving bar on the engine had broken and dropped off. If the train had not been puffing slowly up a steep grade it would have been derailed and some of the passengers probably mangled and killed.

It was a long while before the passengers found this out, and they revealed in the delight of averted disaster. Nobody knew how long the train would be delayed. They could not go on until a new engine was secured. A trainman had to walk to the next block signal tower, miles ahead, and telegraph back for another locomotive.

Mem wandered about, looking at the cactus and sagebrush and deliciously expecting a rattlesnake under every clump.

She saw Tom Holby set out for a brisk walk. He climbed a ragged butte with astonishing agility, winning the applause of the passengers. He had the knack of acquiring applause.

EXCEPTIONAL FOOD SERVED BY MAGGI'S RESTAURANT

Maggi's Restaurant, 335 South First Street, in San Jose, is the Home of Good Eats—Here Popular Dishes Are Served by Expert Cooks—Is One of the Finest Cafes in This Section and is a Favorite Place to Eat for Many People From This Community. When in San Jose Be Sure to Eat at Maggi's.

Maggi's Restaurant has attained a great popularity among people from over the surrounding territory, as it offers the best of food and is conveniently located.

In traveling over the country you will find nothing in greater profusion than poor cafes. This is why it is indeed refreshing to go to such an up-to-date eating place as Maggi's Restaurant. It is unsurpassed in quality of food and service. When the proprietor went into business it was with the idea that a good, modern cafe would be appreciated by the local and traveling public. That this principle was well founded is proved by the success attained. Here you will find everything pure, wholesome and deliciously appetizing.

The quality is equally satisfactory, whether your order be large or small, your trade is desired and appreciated. There is not a more home-like cafe in this part of the country than Maggi's, and there is none that has gained a greater measure of popularity.

The proprietor and his assistants are courteous and dispense the most prodigious hospitality. There is nothing left undone to make you feel at home and that your presence is desired.

We are pleased to compliment Mr. Maggi on the high character of the establishment which is rendering a much needed and highly appreciated service to the public, and to say that the people will always find there refined circles and a pleasant host. We commend Maggi's Restaurant to our hundreds of readers.

Don't let Anybody "KID" you

A lot of people are trying to make you believe they can write miles into a tire. Don't let them "kid" you. "There are no miles in a bottle of ink."

The only way you can get miles into a tire is to build miles in, the way Goodyear does, with the powerful, tractive All-Weather Tread and extra-elastic, extra-durable SUPER-TWIST Cord.

Then you can give a real guarantee, the guarantee we give with the Goodyear Tires we sell:

EVERY GOODYEAR AND PATHFINDER PNEUMATIC TIRE IS GUARANTEED AGAINST DEFECTS FOR ITS ENTIRE LIFE

It does not cost any more to buy a Goodyear. Come in and let us prove it.

CHIROPRACTIC—THE WAY TO IMPROVE AND KEEP YOUR HEALTH

Dr. A. F. McMillan, Chiropractic-Physician, With Offices at 14 East San Fernando, in San Jose, is a Prominent Professional Man of Wide Experience and Broad Professional Attainments Who Has Met With Commendable Success. Over 20 Years Practice. Give Him a Call and Enjoy Health. Phones Ballard 1978 or Columbia 847.

In the professional life of this section there is no one who has attained a more successful career than has Dr. A. F. McMillan, who is recognized as an authority on Chiropractic.

Webster says, "Chiropractic is a philosophy, a science and art of things natural, and a system of adjusting the articulations of the spine by hand for the elimination of the cause of disease."

Other authorities define Chiropractic as the art, science, philosophy, theory, and practice of that branch of the healing art that has for its object the removal of the cause of disease by the manipulation, palation and adjusting of the subluxated vertebral segments of the human spinal column.

The science of Chiropractic is founded upon the principles of spinal adjustments, as the spine is the index to your health, and removes causes by relieving pressure on the nerves. The slogan is, "If the spine is right, the man is right." And anyone who is not feeling in the best of condition should call around and have an examination or an adjustment which may save much future trouble and pain.

It is not strange, that the doctor is one of the busiest professional men in this community, for his services are in constant demand. He is courteous and accommodating, and can be reached day or night by calling Ballard 1978 or Columbia 847. The satisfaction expressed by his many clients, and the general demand for his services, constitute a well-merited tribute to his efficiency and conscientious methods.

Dr. McMillan is to be complimented upon the very valuable work he is doing in this section, and your special attention is directed to his efficient methods.

THE BELL SYSTEM IS BUILDING AHEAD OF THE GROWTH OF THE COUNTRY

This is the telephone's job and goal

THE United States is developing a new civilization. The telephone is an indispensable element in it. The Bell System is building ahead of the growth of this civilization. In 1929 the telephone budget for land and buildings is 54 million dollars, with new buildings rising in 200 cities. New equipment for central offices will cost 142 millions; exchange lines 120 millions; toll lines 119 millions.

The Bell System's total expenditure for plant and service improvements this year will be 559 million dollars.

This outlay is required because the telephone is a universal servant of this democracy. Business uses it to create more prosperity. Homes use it for comfort and protection, for keeping friendships alive and enriching life. Its general use enables each personality to extend itself without regard to distance.

The telephone ideal is that anyone, anywhere, shall be able to talk quickly and at reasonable cost with anyone, anywhere else. There is no standing still in the Bell System.
